Pertinent Paragraphs

No Accidents Reported—At police headquarters this morning it was said that no serious accidents were reported yesterday.

Parents Found—Two children became separated from their parents in the Fair grounds yesterday but the police quickly reunited the families.

Football Dance—For the purpose of raising funds for uniforms and equipment of the Lahaina Football team there will be held a dance at the Lahaina Armory a week from tomorrow night, Saturday, October 21.

Pickpockets Caught—Two professional pickpockets, said to be leaders of a party that came over Tuesday and have been operating since, were caught and hauled yesterday afternoon. The credit for the arrests goes to Huakini Enos.

Waiehu Beach Roads—Harry Mossman, who has subdivided lands on Waiehu beach into beach lots has written the board of supervisors relative to extending the road across the stream and offered to pay $500 toward improvement and turn over rights of way to the county. His proposal was referred to the county engineer.

County To Assist—Sub-land Agent Kahua has written to the board of supervisors asking the assistance of the county engineer on plans for oiler homestead roads. It was said there was money available to the land office for some roads in the Olinia district which would lapse next June. The county engineer was authorized to render such assistance as he is able.

Lahaina Street Names—For the Outdoor Circle, Mrs. H. S. Walker sent a letter accompanied by a map to the board of supervisors which was read at the meeting Wednesday. The letter suggested changes of some names and naming of unnamed streets in Lahaina. Members of the board said all the streets were already named by perfectly good names. After some discussion the subject matter of the letter was referred to the county engineer to take the subject up further with the Circle.

Board Gets Money—Change in the phraseology of the resolution asking advance of the tax money belonging to the county by the territorial treasurer were made by the board of supervisors yesterday in accordance with the suggestion of Treasurer Hapal. The former resolution stated specific amounts for three funds that are short until the county's money comes in. Hapal stated his willingness to advance the amount asked to the general fund and as the board can divide as needed from that fund his suggestion was followed.

Hungarian Partridges—Correspondence of the territorial fish and game commission and E. R. Bevins of the Maui Gun Club was laid before the board of supervisors on Wednesday. Kelly said it was possible to get Hungarian partridges for $10 a pair f.o.b. New York if 50 pair were ordered. Kahua had ordered 20 and an individual on Hawaii 10 and 20 pair were offered Maui. The board decided to purchase the partridge. The Hungarian partridge is said to be hardy and should do well on the mountain. The board was told. Efforts to get some for the islands have been making for a long time.

High School Pupils Hold Straw Election

Students in the English and Civics classes of Maui High School expressed delegate and territorial senator on Tuesday. The outcome for delegate was as the adults voted next day but for senator there was a complete reversal.

The delegate straw vote stood: Wise 199, Lyman 42 and King 29. For senator the vote was: Walsh 91, Goodness 67 and Kamehewa 35. Among the Democrats the vote was strong for Raymond, 39 to 1.

T. Daniel Frawley Players Next Week

Seldom does Maui have an opportunity to see such dramatic art as that which will be offered on Tuesday and Wednesday nights of next week by T. Daniel Frawley's Far eastern Players. The company is a remarkably fine and well balanced one, the best Frawley has ever brought to Hawaii in the long period he has been coming here.

The offerings that are to be made here are two of the best plays from a splendid repertoire, the two that were given most unstinted praise by Honolulu critics.

Miss Adele Blood is called the most beautiful blonde in America and her stage presence and dramatic talents are as outstanding in charm as is her beauty.

A SOLUTION

(Communicated)

Editor of The Maui News:

The papers are so full of language schools these days that one cannot help pondering over the subject. I should like to give you my view of language schools.

To me it seems a much fairer method to have the whole system on a radically new basis. Fairer to the Japanese and fairer to ourselves. Let the Japanese parents from the very outset of their children's education select either a Japanese school wholly maintained by themselves or an American school maintained by our present system of taxation. After they had made the selection they must be required to live up to that choice. This would have to be thoroughly understood. Those in Japanese schools would be considered Japanese and we would have no care of their education. The others would be ours to bring to as full a standard of American citizenship as is possible.

We Hawaiian taxpayers would feel more liberal in voting additional school taxes if we knew that the results in all probability would be expended in the future in our midst. By this system we are not ramming Americanism down the Japanese throats. We are giving them a choice and asking them to live up to it. Right here I should like to say that if any language should be introduced into the public schools, it should first be the Hawaiian language. This is the land of the Hawaiians and their native language should not be completely ignored. It could be easily handled in the larger public schools with very little extra cost. I believe this small recognition of the Hawaiian is their due.

Sincerely yours,

"A CITIZEN."

Fun every minute of the four acts. That's "Clarence."

HOW ABOUT MUSIC?

Now the Fair is most over let's talk about musical instruments. It's astonishing how much music and pleasure can be secured from a harmonica. There was a time when they were somewhat despised but there are ten million Horner Harmonica's sold annually. That's the kind we sell. All sizes, from 50 cents to $2.50.

Hawaiian Sales Company, von Hamm-Young Company and Maui Motors, Ltd., all of this island and Pond Company of Honolulu. The railroad strike prevented having as many cars as they desired but the various makes are well displayed and there are novelties and accessories that interest every motorist. Maui Electric has a very attractive exhibit and a radio receiving apparatus in the Royal Hawaiian Sales Co. booth. Both American Factors and Davies & Co. have exhibits at the Punene end of the building, and their displays are well arranged, finely installed and attractive. Honolulu Music Company is Maui Drug Company has a creditable display and Pain Store has the Auto Feed stove on display, asserted to be the most economical that can be secured. Full comment on that building, also, must be reserved for the future.

Boy Scouts Exhibition

Following the Haiku-Chinese ball game, four picked troops of the Maui Boy Scouts, directed by Executive W. H. (Pop) Hutton, gave exhibitions of their work in different departments. A picked team of scouts from Troop V, Lahaina, showed the various means of rendering first aid. Two scouts, also from Troop V, gave the water boiling exhibition.

To troop IX, Kahului, considerable commendation is due for their ability at pitching tents at a maximum of speed. Troop XI, Hamakua, went through the tower building program and Troop X of Wailuku, the bridge building exhibition.

Credit is due the troops and their officers for the fine showing made, even greater when the fact is made known that Troops 10 and 11 were mere "youngsters" at the game, those troops being but from two to three months organized.

Naval Band Pleases

During the baseball game in the morning, the races in the afternoon and before a capacity crowd in the grandstand in the evening, the United States naval band worked tirelessly to provide the musical entertainment for the fair. Selection after selection, appropriate to the event at hand, was rendered by the navy lads.

Rodeo Goes Big

The rodeo in front of the grand stand was acclaimed an unqualified success. Exhibitions of fancy roping, riding and the dangerous sport of "bull dogging" featured the program. Ben Corbett of mainland fame, and a member of the Hoot Gibson company of motion picture riders furnished most of the thrills during the rodeo.

In the early part of the program he illustrated the ability of the expert cowboy to rope a running horse around the snout or by the tail. Many of these feats he accomplished after he had first jumped rope with the flying lariat before an oncoming steed.

During Corbett's attempts to "bull dog" a wild steer—meaning in plain English to leap from the back of a galloping horse to that of a running bull—he once fell beneath the hoofs of the enraged animal and once was thrown violently into the race track railing. Neither experience deterred him from his determination to accomplish his "stunt" and on the third attempt he succeeded, riding the steer and finally, by sheer strength, throwing it to the ground.

Previous to the accomplishment of the feat, however, two of the steers utilized became discouraged and left the show hat on its back by hurdling the fence. A halt was called until a group of cowboys went out into the open field and roped up.

Chief Big Tree and Ortega and Firewater, an Indian lass, interested the crowd with Indian dances. Firewater, beating a tom-tom furnished the rhythm for the dance. Chief Big Tree, it was announced was the model for the Indian head which appears upon the Buffalo nickel.

Chief Ortega was himself a member of the cowboy party who later played "musical chairs." This event consisted in the attempts of the boys to jump from their horses and secure a seat on a pop bottle box whenever the naval band ceased the lively tune it was playing.

"Texas Johnny," a young horse, thrilled the crowd by dancing the hula and the cake walk and by saying his prayers and going to sleep in the middle of the race track.

Near the entrance to the grounds a huge crowd attended the Japanese wrestling match and hundreds thronged the "Joy Zone," visiting the score of concessions or trying their skill at the various games which netted the lucky winner a ukelele, kewpie doll or other trinket.

Shows Are Novel

The trained rats and mice were of particular interest to the fair-goers as were the monkey race drivers who simulated the big classics of the mainland in miniature machines on a miniature track.

Mendoza, with his hair raising Globe of Fate, thrilled hundreds during the evening when he defied the laws of gravity and looped the loop within a wire cage on a motorcycle.

The merry-go-round in the center of the zone attracted scores of kiddies and not a few adults. The same proved true of the Ferris wheel which carried its full complement of passengers each time the big circle was put into motion.

Tonight additional features will be added to the rodeo—among them "bull dogging" from an automobile instead of by horse. New "stunts" will be offered on the joy zone.

Editor Maui News:

If the young people born and brought up in Hawaii will not work on the "plantations" how do they expect the "plantations" to carry on their work. The young people of the present day seem to think that there is something degrading in "manual labor." I have been on the "Islands" for 24 years now and have worked at all kinds of jobs. The sooner that the young people waken up to the knowledge that there are not enough "stiff collar" jobs to go around the better. The more people that are imported into the "Islands"
